PRECONVENTION WORKSHOP

How to Promote Your Work Effectively and Ethically Through Multimedia (WS Code: Preconv #2)

Sponsored by APA Division 42 (Independent Practice) and the APA Office of Continuing Education in Psychology.

Workshop Description

Need to promote your independent practice, market your books, or attract research funds? You can avoid costly advertising by using abundant and free multimedia opportunities. However, if you fear public speaking, being boring, translating complicated information from academia and papers into clear sound bites without jargon, or pressure to overstep ethics and be misquoted by media, learn from this INTRODUCTORY audience-participation workshop to promote your work effectively in the media while adhering to ethical standards. Dr. Goldberg is a multimedia and clinical psychologist, public speaking trainer, designer of psychology web sites, and host and producer of a weekly psychology TV program. She employs psychology content multimedia demos and spontaneous mock interviews with workshop attendees to teach you to obtain, effectively use, and coordinate free multimedia (TV, radio, Internet, print) opportunities; establish a recognizable authoritative identity; deliver lively informational messages people understand and remember; present yourself optimally; and enjoy being in the media.
